Soldier Lyrics--No. 3.

"MY PAP'S IN THIS PARADE."

I'm waitin' on this corner
To see the soldiers come.
Hark to the bugle's playin'
An' the throbbin' of the drum;
Oh, listen to the foot beats
As the veterans march along—
'T is the music of the Union,
An' it makes a pleasant song.

Quit scroungin' an' a-shovin',
Cain't you let a feller be?
They ain't no one, I reckon,
Has a better right to see;
You needn't look so fierce-like,
For I won't be dismayed,
I'm uster honest fightin' men—
My pap's in this parade!

He fit with Grant and Sherman,
An' mebbe Sheridan,
An' was in all the biggest fights,
Per he's that kinder man;
He went into the army
An' fit till sixty-five—
You bet he would be fightin' yet
Were any foes alive.

Now the line's a little trembly—
Not 't ke it uster be
When they marched along with Sherman
From Atlanta to the sea;
An' the shouts them Eastern fellows
At Appomattox raised,
Would frighten from a thousand hills
The cattle where they grazed.

There they come, the gallant heroes!
Hurrah, the G. A. R. H.
I'm lookin' for the Goshen Post,
B'gosh—an' there they are!
See that old rooster on a crutch?
Dad, are you a most play-d?
Hurrah, hurrah, for Goshen!
My pap's in this parade!

Magnanimity of Republicans.

Toledo Blade.

The Republican press of the country is acting wisely during these troublesome times. Too broad and patriotic to magnify the thousands of failures, it has sought rather to pass them by and direct the public to look for the better things coming. That time can be hastened by Democrats being patriotic enough to remove doubt and distrust by assuring the country that the American system of protection will not be disturbed.

Farragut's Flagship.

Boston Herald.

It is going to take half a million dollars to repair Farragut's flagship Hartford and place her in commission—which means that the ship will have to be practically rebuilt. ## CEREMONIES OF PRESENTATION

Magnificent Grand Army Badge for Commander Weissert.Studded with Costly Gems—Colors from
The Relief Corps for Indiana
Veterans.

MEETING OF THE
staff of Commander-in-chief Weissert was quietly called for 5
o'clock yesterday evening by Senior Aid-de-camp Brown, the understood purpose being the presentation of a badge to the Commander-in-chief on behalf of the staff. The meeting was called to order in the main parlor of the Denison by General Brown.

who stated that he wished to make a statement of his doings for the past two or three months. From various sources he had received $1,120.49, a great deal more than he expected. His expenses had been $1,066.57, which leaves a balance of $53.92, and he wished to be directed as to the disposition of this sum. It was moved, seconded and unanimously carried, by the members of the staff present that this amount be expended in purchasing for Senior Aid-de-camp Brown a suitable badge in recognition of his efficient services. General Brown stated that he had had prepared for Mrs. General Weissert a handsome staff badge, similar to those worn by the staff members in design, except that the word "honorary" had been placed thereupon. He asked if it was the pleasure of the staff to elect Mrs. Weissert to honorary membership in indorsement of his action. This action, on motion, was taken by the staff.

General Brown further stated that, having received a hint from the adjutant general that Mrs. Weissert desired a badge, he had painted to beautify her home, he had taken the liberty to purchase a painting to be presented to her in the name of the staff. On motion, this action of the senior aid-de-camp was unanimously approved.

"I have also received a letter from a comrade," said General Brown, "one of the staff who said 'Comrade Brown, if there is any surplus left, devote it to that old war horse, Comrade Gray.' I took the suggestion kindly, and ordered a badge to decorate Comrade Gray, the adjutant general." On motion this action was unanimously approved. The chairman announced that the members of the staff would rendezvous at the statehouse at 9:30, where mounts would be in waiting.

The time having arrived for the presentation of the badge to Commander Weissert, it was found that he had gone to the Union Depot in search of his wife, who was expected to arrive at that time. The staff was dismissed until his arrival. During the interval General Brown inquired if the comrades were willing to listen to a song on Hoke Smith by the editor of the "Herald." In response to an affirmative chorus, the editor proceeded to sing, not about Hoke Smith, whom he announced that he had thrown over, but about the Grand Army of the Republic, the crowd joining in the chorus. The arrival of General Weissert, the staff was again called to order. General Brown announced to Commander Weissert the action of the staff in making Mrs. Weissert an honorary member, and produced a badge, saying: "If Mrs. Weissert were here, I would take pleasure in presenting her with this badge. As she is not here, I ask you to perform that duty for us. Also," said the general, producing the oil painting purchased for Mrs. Weissert, "Learning, Commander-in-chief, that it was the wish of Mrs. Weissert that she might have an oil painting of her home, I have bought one, which you may present to her on behalf of this staff. It has become the custom, Commander, that when the commander of a special family is broken up some mark of official recognition be given him as a token of the esteem in which he has been held. I thought of this presentation, I had expected, would devolve upon another member of the staff, but that member is not present. As members of your staff we have received many marks of kindness and consideration. We have reciprocated by preparing a testimonial of our esteem. May I ask you to accept this badge, (producing the elegant badge prepared for Commander Weissert) and wear this over your loyal heart, in memory of the loyal comrades whom you have honored. (Applause.)

Commander Weissert was visibly affected by the unexpected honor and responded: "Comrade Brown, and members of the staff, you can imagine how I feel just now. I see in my presence, looking into the faces of those before me, comrades who have fitted up my hands and helped me do the great work that was entrusted to me a year ago at Washington, by appointment. You remember, comrades, in a feeble manner I attempted at that time to thank the encampment. I said I would devote a year of my nature and soul to the interests of this great order. When I got home and looked over the amount of work that had been done, I found that it was not a small task, but I knew from the way you had expressed yourselves at that encampment that you stood ready at any and all times to assist those whom you had elected to manage the affairs of this order. Among the prerogatives of command, I felt that it was my duty to select the aids-de-camp, and in conformity to the rules, and with the advice of the department commanders and the other officers of the order, I had the great good fortune of selecting a staff of which I am proud, and comrades, that staff is represented by yourselves. I have stood by me all through this long year of hard service. But that service has been most pleasant because you were ever ready to give your aid, your counsel, your advice and your assistance, and to-day, before we separate, I want to thank you for all that you have done in assisting me in my endeavors to lift this grand order a little higher. And if, in laying down the gavel in a few days, it shall be said that this administration was a good one, why, comrades, it will be the happiest moment of my life. Comrades, I thank you; I can't talk."

This was not all, for Commander Weissert's cup of joy, already full, was to be slopped over by a new gift, which came in the shape of a Waterbury watch from the comrades of New Jersey. A brief presentation speech expressed the hope that it would run a thousand years, "and then wither like a daisy," that in fact, he might live long enough to wind it up. Commander Weissert promised to wear it next his heart, and if the time ever came that he was unable to wear it, he would call upon his staff. On motion General Brown, three rousing cheers and a tiger were given General Weissert, and after the Commander had thanked the members of the staff to pay him a personal visit, the meeting adjourned.

The badge of General Weissert is the most beautiful Grand Army badge ever made. General Brown having instructed the jeweler to make the finest badge he knew how, regardless of cost, it contains nearly a carat of diamonds. The strap is decorated with diamonds, and pendant is a splendid 1 1/2 carat stone. The background is of regular brocade silk. The badge presented to Mrs. Weissert is a copy of the regular Stagg badge, the General Weissert medal being inclosed in a golden wreath, while the strap is decorated with diamonds. The painting presented is an American landscape by an American artist, "Eventide," by Arthur Hoesler. The badge prepared for Adjutant-General Gray is a regular Grand Army badge, with diamonds at the points of the star, the rank strap, and elsewhere upon the badge.

PRESENTED OLD GLORY.
Standard of Colors Given the Indiana Department by the State W. R. C.
At 10 o'clock last evening, in the corridors of the Capitol, occurred the flag presentation of the Woman's Relief Corps of the Department of Indiana to the Grand Army of the Republic. Long before the hour for the ceremony to begin the corridors were crowded with visitors. When Department Commander Johnston and Mrs. Conklin, president of the Woman's Relief Corps of Indiana, arrived the crowd assembled around the rotunda of the Capitol. Mrs. Conklin was accompanied by the ex-president of the corps, Mrs. Hitt.

besides a large number of the ladies of the department. They marched in, carrying a banner and the stars and stripes. Mrs. Conklin, president of the Relief Corps, then arose and addressed her comrades and those of the G. A. R. She said:

The purpose of this meeting is to fill a long cherished plan of the Woman's Relief Corps that of presenting to the Department of Indiana, Grand Army of the Republic, a stand of our national colors. At the Department Convention, held in Evansville, last spring, a resolution was introduced by Mrs. Agnes Hitt, to purchase a banner, to be presented to the Grand Army as a token of the esteem in which they are held by their auxiliary. This resolution met the unanimous approval of the convention. A committee was appointed consisting of Mrs. Agnes Hitt, of Indianapolis, Mrs. Ida S. McWade, of Elkhart, and Mary J. Mueley, of Bloomington, and the department president was instructed to call upon the corps of the State for donations to this worthy purpose. To this call the corps generously responded, and I would like to tell you of the beautiful letters accompanying almost every contribution, of the words of loving sympathy and appreciation of the soldiers, particularly those of our own State. The unanimous sentiment expressed is that no banner is too elegant nor too costly for "our boys" to follow in the grand parade to-morrow.

Our committee, finding that a stand of colors would be more acceptable to the Grand Army than a banner, accordingly purchased these flags which the chairman, Mrs. Agnes Hitt, will now present.

Mrs. Hitt, chairman of the committee on flag presentation, then advanced with the ladies of the corps, presented their stand of colors to the Department of Indiana. Department Commander James T. Johnston, then stepped forward and said in reply:

In behalf of all the posts in Indiana, I wish to thank the ladies of the Woman's Relief Corps for this beautiful tribute. If I should attempt to express my feelings on this occasion, words would fail me. On behalf of 25,000 of us as loyal and brave soldiers, as ever lived, I accept this standard of colors. I promise you that, as the flag was carried for in the days of sixty-one, we will properly preserve and cherish it now. I become more and more convinced as time goes on that no G. A. R. organization is complete without a Woman's Relief Corps. The flag can be said of any organization, for the Auxiliary has its wisdom and its courage, and its contentment with the advice and counsel of woman. The ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, again, I thank you for the good you have done and the charities you have bestowed upon the boys who wore the blue.

When Indiana falls in line in the grand parade to-day the standard of colors presented to the State department last night will be carried at the head of the column. After the ceremony of presentation was over, the officials of the G. A. R. and Relief Corps, accompanied by the ladies of the corps, proceeded to the hall to receive the reception. Many visitors who came expecting to witness the flag presentation were too late. The ceremony was held early in the evening, and the ladies of the corps, many of whom did not witness the presentation, remained for some time listening to the excellent music by the Minnesota State Band.

Chaplain Lozier is here.
Chaplain John Hogarth Lozier, of Iowa, is to preside at the reunion of army chaplains, which is to take place at Central-western church, on Wednesday. Chaplain Lozier is one of the very few delegates, perhaps the only officer, present at this encampment who attended the Indianapolis meeting twenty-seven years ago, which resulted in the organization of the G. A. R. Rev. Lozier was elected national chaplain at that encampment. To a Journal reporter yesterday morning he described the first encampment, at which only three or four hundred delegates were present, and a great number of visiting veterans, and remarked the great contrast presented by the present encampment with its hosts of veterans and visitors. Chaplain Lozier is a Hoosier by birth and education, and did efficient service during the war, first as a recruiter of soldiers and afterward as chaplain in an Indiana regiment. The programme of the reunion of chaplains has not yet been fully arranged, but will include songs, speeches and reminiscences by the chaplains present, numbering probably two hundred.

Raised Their Prices.
Complaint was made yesterday that a few of the downtown eating houses had raised their prices. Some of the prices on edibles have been raised, but the prices are not exorbitant. Many of the barbers' shops are charging old soldiers 15 cents for a shave, letting their regular customers off with the usual charge of 10 cents.

Ill Aboard Ship.
Shipmate George W. Shaw, of Zanesville, O., who was taken sick after the parade Saturday, is convalescent, but will probably return to his home to-day.
